EASTERN STATES

Shocking Murder and Suicide

CINCINNATI Feb 29.—A special to the Gazette from Muncie, Indiana states that a farmer named Wells Williamson living near that place followed his daughter to Deville where she had gone on Sunday and found her in the house of a friend. He there cut her throat, killing her instantly, and then shot himself twice in the mouth with a revolver. He was living at noon to day but not expected to survive long. Wells has a large family.

WASHINGTON CITY

Congressional

WASHINGTON February 29.—In the House the bill extending the time of the State of Wisconsin for the completion of the Bayfield & St Croix Railroad was taken up. After various filibustering motions the vote of yesterday ordering the main question was reconsidered. Holman then moved to refer the bill to the Committee on Public Lands with instructions. Agreed to—ayes 102 noes [illegible]

In the Senate Trumbull from the Judiciary Committee, reported a bill to protect purchasers of lands sold for the payment of taxes in the late insurrectionary States.

The Japanese will be presented to the President on Monday next, and will remain here about a month.

The French Legation has transmitted to the Department of State four medals designed for Captain Peterson, of the ship Thatcher Magoun, of Boston, and to David Roberts, mate, and John Rawley and William Anderson, sailors, of the same vessel, in recognition of their services in rescuing the crew of the French brig Le Grande Frederick.

CUBA

The Grand Duke Alexis at Havana.

HAVANA Feb 29.—The Grand Duke Alexis and suite landed here yesterday afternoon, and were received by the Captain General and several gentlemen. The streets through which the procession passed were decorated with banners, and the sidewalks were lined with thousands of spectators. The Captain General, Valmaseda, the Segunda Cabo, the Governor of Havana and the Russian Consul dined with the Prince last evening, and a State dinner was given at the Palace to day.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE

Attempt on Queen Victoria's Life

LONDON, Feb 29.—The excitement to night over the reported attempt on the life of the Queen is intense. Extras of the evening papers appeared in rapid succession as the details became known. Crowds are collected in the streets discussing the news and awaiting further particulars. An official statement of the facts was promptly made in Parliament this evening, which, when it became known outside, greatly relieved the public anxiety.

Particulars of the Assault.

NEW YORK Feb 29.—The World's London special says the young Fenian who assaulted the Queen struck her in the breast with his pistol at the same time presenting the petition for amnesty for the Fenians, exclaiming "sign or die!" Prince Arthur who was in the carriage knocked the man down. When O'Connor was questioned he said his design was to frighten the Queen into doing justice to Ireland.

French Affairs

PARIS Feb 29.—The Pays newspaper, the publication of which was suspended some time ago, has again appeared.

The Count de Chambord has made arrangements for a temporary residency at the Hague.

It is reported that Thiers has again offered the Pope the hospitality of France and that Austria has tendered his Holiness Salzburg Castle for a residence.

CALIFORNIA.

From San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO March 1.—The Germans last night held another meeting and appointed polling places for an election to be held Tuesday next for delegates to the German Republican Convention, the avowed object of which is to correct the defects which now exist in the Republican party.

The Pacific Proprietary Medicine Company incorporated for the purpose of working and selling patent medicines. Capital, one million.

Weather warm and cloudy. It rained several hours this morning.

The steamer M[illegible] with Australian mails got off at 1 o'clock this morning.

The steamer Alaska from Panama will bring one of the heaviest cargoes received here from the Isthmus in several years. She is not expected to arrive before to-morrow morning.

Thomas Winship, who shot twice at Augustus B Rowland of the United States steamer Saranac, last Sunday morning, was this morning committed for trial and bail fixed at three thousand dollars.

Hon Harry [illegible] Byrne died at half past nine o'clock this morning, after a long and painful illness. He was a native of the city of New York, and aged sixty-three. He was a pioneer of 1849. He was the first husband of Matilde Herron, the actress, but they did not live together any length of time, and the subject of the marriage was carefully avoided by the deceased in conversation for many years past.

A few days ago, in a speech in the Senate, Mr Trumbull identified himself with the so-called "Liberal Republican" movement. Mr Morton, replying, said it was simply a movement to divide and defeat the Republican party. Since Senator Trumbull had taken the course others could do no less than recognize the fact that was generally understood, that he was a Presidential candidate of the Liberal Republicans. The people generally understood that the Senator had stepped out of the Republican party—stopping, however, within easy returning distance—and was standing [illegible] back [illegible] (Laughter.) Senator M[orton] [illegible] that the Liberal Republican platform was essentially Democratic, and that he believed the [illegible] [illegible] which declared the Kuklux law unconstitutional. [illegible] Senator Trumbull had talked much about civil service reform [illegible] [illegible] made no humbler and [illegible] recommendations to office since the Administration came into power.

A gentleman [illegible] was courting a rich widow [illegible] [illegible] son who was playing in the room: "[illegible] this poor Mr Bonhomme has lost all [illegible] back [illegible] won't you give him some of yours which you brought to-day?"

EASTERN NEWS

GENERAL AND POLITICAL

The Pension bill as reported a few days ago, appropriates $30,480,000. Another legacy of the rebellion and of Democratic principles.

Senator Schurz seems to have been taken into full fellowship with the Democracy. But he has met with the unspeakable calamity of being "indorsed" by a resolution of the Tammany Society of New York.

A prominent Eastern journal has the following: In thirty five months President Grant has reduced the national debt $287,758,310, insuring an annual saving to the tax payers in interest, of $17,598,034. Can a bolting Republican elected by Democratic repudiators be expected to improve on this?

Mrs Attorney General Williams gave a brilliant reception at her house at Washington on the 13th of February. The Chronicle and other papers give an account of it. Very many notable persons called. Mrs Williams was highly complimented by the press on her manner of entertaining her guests.

The Republican State Convention of Indiana assembled at Indianapolis on the 23d of February. General Thomas Browne was nominated for Governor, Leonidas Sexton for Lieutenant Governor, and Godlove S Orth for Congressman at large. Delegates were elected to the National Convention and instructed for Grant and Colfax.

A New York Herald correspondent in Paris says that negotiations are now going on for the purchase of the Island of St. Pierre Miquelon, by American citizens. The acquirement of the Island is with the view of rendering more effective the telegraphic communication between the United States and Europe, the present operations of the French cable which terminates at St Pierre, being inconvenient and not equal to the necessities of the service.

The New York Herald of the 20th February has the following short editorial: "The British War Office estimates for the support of the army during the military year from April 1872, to April 1873, shows reduction in the Government demand from that of the last but still current year of a million of pounds sterling. This does not look like war. A few such items of retrenchment at home would soon make up thirty millions of dollars in gold to tender for a discharge from the American bill of damages in the Alabama case."

The State Church in England is bound to go. The Irish disestablishment has given an impetus to the agitation for a disestablishment in their sister islands, which cannot long be resisted, especially as the proposition involves the dismissal of a horde of lazy ecclesiastical blood-suckers and the saving of from fifteen to twenty millions of dollars a year to the National Treasury. Thus, step by step, England is on the road to the Divine rights of the people, and no hedging by Her Majesty's Government on the Alabama claims will serve to arrest this revolutionary movement.

Washington correspondence of the New York Herald says: The latest story about Colonel Forney's resignation is that he resigned to succeed Cameron in the Senate with Cameron's full and hearty approval. The alliance of Forney and McClure in the Gray-McClure contest was owing to obligations which Forney owed Cameron's old foe, and this, it is claimed has made no breach between Forney and Cameron. This gossip very ingeniously puts Forney on both sides of the fence at once, and it is likely that the side he is really on will only be determined by the Philadelphia Convention.

By the completion of the Union Pacific Railroad bridge over the Missouri, connecting Council Bluffs with Omaha, there is now an unbroken line of railroad across the continent. Although it has been customary to speak of the railroad as extending from San Francisco to New York, Boston etc., passengers and freight have hitherto been transported across the Missouri by steamer. This necessarily involved inconvenience and some delay which will in future be obviated. It will now be possible to start a train of cars at the wharf at Oakland, California, and run it direct through to Boston, a distance of 3,[illegible] miles.

The Republican Convention of Kansas which assembled at Lawrence on the 21st of February, was the largest ever held in the State. Resolutions were unanimously adopted which expressed renewed confidence in the principles of the Republican party, recounting the benefits it has conferred on the country, affirming generally the satisfactory condition of affairs at the present time, and expressing that it was largely attributable to the patience, courage and wisdom of President Grant, and instructing the delegates to vote for his nomination. The Convention was harmonious, there not being a dissenting demonstration.

The New York Herald of February 20th, alluding editorially to the unusual fall of snow throughout the States and Territories, says: What will be the consequence should there be a sudden and general thaw with the addition of spring rains over that vast region? The consequence will be such floods down the great Missouri and the Platte and the Arkansas and the Red river as will probably deluge the city of New Orleans. The authorities and the citizens of that prosperous city, therefore, would do well to consider and to prepare for this danger in time, or with the return of June, if not sooner, they may have more disastrous crevasses than the worst in the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

An old scandal about General Washington has just been set at rest. A correspondent of the New Albany (Indiana) Ledger reports examining a record in the handwriting of Colonel Thomas Posey, which puts at rest the story that he was the illegitimate son of General Washington. The record discloses the fact that General Posey was born in 1754 and married Mary Thornton on the 22d of January 1781. The result of this union was ten children, of which the sixth son, Colonel Thomas Posey, the assumed illegitimate child, was born on the 24th of March 1791. The character of his mother was such as to place her beyond even the suspicion of a violation of the marriage vow. Besides the time at which the birth of the pretended child is fixed was before her marriage.

A curious fact has come to light at Washington concerning Jeff Davis. Evidence has been found to be in existence that instead of being born in Kentucky, as has always been supposed, and as he has always asserted, he was really born in Massachusetts, and therefore instead of being a pure blooded son of Southern chivalry he is only a Massachusetts Yankee. Lanman's Dictionary of Congress puts Davis down rather indefinitely as having been born in Christian county, Kentucky, in 1808. Persons who claim to be well informed say that Jeff was born in Old Stockbridge, Massachusetts, [illegible] and was removed to Kentucky with his father when a small child. His father is said to have been a wheelwright by trade, and the house where he lived on one side of the road, and the shop where he worked on the other side, are still remembered by living witnesses. After all the illustrious rebel comes from globe an[illegible] to a[illegible]

Of the debate on the sale of arms to the French the New York Times of the 15th inst says: Mr Conkling yesterday replied to the elaborate speeches of Messrs Sumner and Schurz on the sale of arms during the French and German war. His exposure of the motive for the introduction of the preposterous resolution, which no Senator could vote for without declaring the country disgraced, was very scathing, and added to the discomfort already brought on the authors of the resolution. It could not be agreeable to Mr Sumner to be told the fact published that the Democratic committees are aiding New Hampshire with his speeches, but that is a slight humiliation compared to the growing popular conviction that he has utterly forgotten patriotism in an unsuccessful attempt to gratify his personal and political resentment. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] that will further [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] as to whether he or any other Senator has been committing a penal offense in carrying on a correspondence with the agent of a foreign Government with intent to influence the conduct of a foreign Government to defeat the measures of the United States. No one doubts that the conduct of Messrs Sumner and Schurz has been disgraceful. The question yet remains, whether it has not been unlawful.

SHORT PARAGRAPHS

Old women of marvellous longevity seem somehow to gravitate to the almshouse. Lancaster, Mass., has in its poorhouse one Aunt Gates, 101 years old, who distinctly remembers seeing her father take down his gun to go forth and fight at Bunker Hill.

The Connecticut Democracy have come squarely to the new departure. But they have come to it only after it has failed everywhere else. It was tried in Ohio last year and resulted in signal disaster. It was tried in various other States and ended in the same way. Is there any reason to suppose it will have a different fate in Connecticut?

The Chicago scalawag aldermen are coming to grief in fine style. The Tribune says: "One alderman per day is the allowance of Judge Tree's Court, now that the law points have all been settled by the Supreme Court. The indicted individuals are brought up like pigs to a packing house. You hear a thud (or a verdict,) and the victim disappears through a trap-door, and the next one comes on. Buhs disappeared through the trap yesterday."

The Cooperstown (N. H.) Freeman's Journal—home organ of Judge Nelson of the United States Supreme Court—announces that Chief Justice Chase has dismissed all thought of being a candidate for President this year, and is in favor of the nomination of Senator Trumbull as the opposition candidate. The Journal also asserts that most of the leading Democrats in this State are at present inclined to accept Senator Trumbull as the "coming man," but oppose any precipitate action.

Says the New York Independent: The President has directed Secretary Boutwell and Collector Arthur to devise some substitute for the New York General Order warehouses, about which there has been so much complaint. General Grant found the system in existence when he came into office, and now proposes to abolish it, as soon as possible, for something better and far less liable to abuse. While others talk loudly about reform, the President applies his hand directly to the work.

The Emperor of Germany has or is about to make determined war against the Internationals. Not only does he intend to inaugurate a crusade against the Society in Germany, but he will, if he can, have the doors of other nations closed against refugees, who may be compelled to flee the Empire on account of complicity in the machinations of the revolutionary workingmen. The late movements of Governments and Potentates against the Internationals will serve to fan the flame of the revolutionary spirit of the Society rather than to subdue it.

The Presidential Fight.

The following is from the San Francisco Bulletin, a non-partisan paper:

The Republican State Conventions are one by one endorsing Grant's Administration and favoring his renomination, with apparently no dissent worthy of notice. That there will be the same unanimity in his favor in the Conventions called to elect delegates to the National Convention is hardly probable, and yet the opposition has so far given no signs of agreement on a candidate against him. Either it is not very strong or it is badly generaled. Unless there is speedily some concert of action looking to the support of a particular candidate, the election of an overwhelming majority of Grant delegates, and his consequent nomination at Philadelphia, may be regarded as a foregone conclusion, if indeed, it be not inevitable in any event.

It is a significant fact that nobody has been suggested as an opposition candidate, except with reference to an independent ticket, meant for the support of "possum Democrats." This seems to be a concession that Grant's nomination is inevitable, and that the only way to defeat him is outside of the party. Greeley's declaration in the New York Tribune, that party platforms and nominations are purely arbitrary, is either a hint in the same direction, or a threat meant to frighten the Conventions.

It is further significant, in this connection, that the Democratic State Central Committees of Ohio and Illinois have declined to call State Conventions, at present, for the nomination of delegates to a Presidential Convention. This is thought to indicate an intention to follow that policy of wise passiveness, to use Wordsworth's phrase, which has been so strongly urged by the Democracy. Probably the shrewdest Democratic leaders prefer to wait and see whether there is a sure prospect of a formidable bolt in the Republican ranks, before consenting definitely to put their organization in abeyance, and coalesce with Republicans in favor of a Republican candidate.

The German Press

The St Louis Democrat of the 30th of January says:

The German press of the country is not enthusiastic over the Missouri Liberal Convention. The New York Staats-Zeitung (Democratic) says the whole affair seems to be not much better than wind; that the Liberals of Missouri have no reason for boasting of the results in this State, since they seem to confined to two things—the election of Blair to the Senate and the impairment of the State credit. The bill to pay the interest on the State debt in greenbacks it characterizes as one of the meanest acts of repudiation that ever characterized a State. It adds that the Westliche Post has been making a fool of itself lately on several subjects, especially the Ohio Senatorial election. It does not expect much of the Cincinnati Convention; thinks there will be none but Missourians there, and finally expresses the fear that the Liberal Republicans of this State have been eating too heartily of the Missouri Republican [illegible]

"They are crazy and weak," says this influential German organ, "and do not deserve the confidence of their countrymen in the honesty, integrity and solidity of their intentions."

The Illinois Staats-Zeitung, the organ of the German Republicans of our neighboring State—says the Liberals have sent their ship to sea without a captain. It thinks Palmer would be a good man for them, as he has recently attempted to rival Jeff Davis as a champion of State Sovereignty, and that as he has friends among the Republicans of Illinois, he might bring a charming dower to the Liberal wedding. He is also a free trader, though according to the article from which we quote, he knows no more about this subject than Schurz does.

The New York Evening Post, which is a decidedly Anti Administration journal, says of the Custom House investigation, after the prosecuting witnesses, including Greeley, had given their testimony:

The friends of the President are not the only persons who will be heartily glad to learn that there is not a word of evidence which tends to implicate Mr Grant in any of the scandalous transactions with which he has been charged by partisan opponents in connection with the Custom House.

The evidence affords no excuse for assailing his personal integrity, and journals which have indulged their temper in aspersion of this kind would act wisely to retract their attacks at once.

Missouri Politics

On the 22d February the Republican State Convention of Missouri assembled at Jefferson City. The best men of the State were present and the respectability of the Convention was never before equalled in Missouri. Delegates were chosen to the National Convention, but were not instructed as to how they should vote. The Committee on Resolutions reported the platform as follows, which was unanimously adopted:

First—We congratulate the people that the principles of the Republican party have realised the blessings of peace and prosperity at home, and vindicated the honor of the country abroad, and we reaffirm our adherence to those principles.

Second—We heartily endorse the present National Administration in its conduct of national affairs and point with pride to its great and lasting achievements.

Third—That inasmuch as discouraging elements of other States are now looking to Missouri for confirmation of their hopes of division in our ranks, we take this action to proclaim to the public the fact that the party in this State is now united, vigorous and enthusiastic. There is no cause for schism, and there is no schism. That it will poll the full Republican vote for the nominee of the National Republican Convention. That the present so called Liberal Republican faction, if considered apart from the Democratic party, as it should be, is contemptible in numbers, too feeble to organize and too [illegible] to expose its weakness by a separate organization—a mere clique of disaffected persons seeking to perpetuate a division which is now utterly groundless.

Fourth—We declare our unswerving confidence in the integrity, patriotism and sincere devotion to public affairs of the present Chief Magistrate of the nation, and we pledge ourselves and the Republican party to abide by, support and carry to victory the platform and candidates presented to the people by the National Convention, to be [held] at Philadelphia on the 5th of June next.

The fifth endorses the recommendation of universal amnesty by the President in his last annual message.

Land Grabbing Again

On the 22d of January Mr Corbett presented to the Senate some fifteen memorials from citizens of various parts of Oregon protesting against the operations of the Swamp Land Ring of this State. They [were referred] to the Committee on [illegible]. The memorials were in the following language:

We, the undersigned citizens of the State of Oregon, would respectfully represent that, under color of declarative [illegible], in [pursu]ance of the act of Congress approved March 12, 1860, the Legislature of the State of Oregon at its last session, passed an act providing for the selection and sale of the swamp and overflowed lands belonging to the State of Oregon, and that under the provisions of the said act of the Legislature, [illegible] members of the Legislature and their confreres, made out prior to the passage of said act filings to cover nearly all the lands claimed to be of the character denominated swamp and overflowed lands, thereby [creat]ing a monopoly to the great injury of [illegible] and laboring citizens, and further, by the acts of the commissioners appointed to make the selections of swamp and [illegible] lands, pre-emptors and homestead settlers are being deprived of their just rights, in direct violation of the spirit of the said act of Congress, and in opposition to the genius of republican institutions.

The greater part of the lands thus claimed are made valuable only on account of the overflow, thereby producing the finest of hay lands, without which large districts of the country would be rendered wholly unfit for settlement.

Therefore, believing that the grant of Congress has lapsed, and the subject-matter fallen under the direct power and control of Congress, we respectfully ask for such legislation as will secure to actual settlers, in limited quantities, under the provisions of the homestead and pre-emption rights all lands that are of sufficient value to justify such settlements.

Another Testimonial of a CASE OF CHRONIC SORE EYES!
Of Six Years' Standing.
PORTLAND OREGON Feb. 23, 1872
TO THE PUBLIC.—I wish to add my testimonial to the number that Dr ABORN has received while here. For about six years I suffered terribly with Granulated Sore Eyes, being nearly blind at times, and life was but a burden to me in this miserable condition. No treatment that I had ever received done me any good. I was advised to apply to Dr Aborn some six months ago, but was deterred from doing so at the time as some said that he was so high in his charges that I thought it was useless for me to apply. Some two months since I learned that he was not only certain to cure all such diseases of the eye, but that his charges were in many cases even less than those who charged me by the visit, so I applied to Dr Aborn and informed him of my long suffering and circumstances. The Doctor seeing that I was in a pitiful condition, he at once proposed to cure me and would make no charge unless I was able to pay. I hardly knew how to accept such a generous offer. I placed myself under his treatment, and in two weeks' time I looked and felt like another person, and to-day I am well, with sound eyes, thanks to the Doctor's skillful treatment. I have paid the Doctor only a small amount. He would not accept more as I am a poor woman. Such kind treatment as I have received from him—a stranger—was so unexpected that I hardly knew how to express my heartfelt gratitude. The afflicted who apply to Dr Aborn will find him a kind hearted and charitable gentleman. I have lived in Portland about 20 years and am well known to most of our old citizens.

A Speedy Restoration of Sight.
TO THE AFFLICTED.—I hereby certify that I was painfully afflicted with sore eyes and blindness, and after trying several of our best physicians without success, or in fact receiving any relief whatever, I was induced to visit Dr Aborn, and after being treated by him two days I recovered my sight almost entirely, having been blind before applying to him. The British Press on the American Claims [illegible] able article from the leading British papers on the American [illegible] under the Treaty of Washington. The general tone of [illegible] in which the business has been conducted on the part of Great Britain. It is substantially admitted by the London Times that the management of the American case has been every way superior to that of the British, and the British Ministry and even the Queen are arraigned therefor. That paper declares that the agreement for arbitration is entirely one sided and complains that no matter how unreasonable the arbitrators may consider it to judge the conduct of Great Britain ten years ago by rules framed last year their award must be governed by those rules and they are not allowed to consult their own sense of justice. This is equivalent to saying that the British Commissioners allowed themselves to be led into an agreement which they never should have accepted. It is further a virtual admission that the American case as presented is in accordance with the terms of the Treaty. In effect, it is more a complaint against the British Cabinet than against the United States. The question is, can Great Britain repudiate an agreement she has once solemnly made because she has just awakened to the discovery that the agreement is not what she would have it to be?

Pursuing its complaint as to the management of the British case the Times says it is lamentable to confess that no nation is so negligent of form in its public documents as Great Britain; that the Queen's speeches are proverbially slovenly, and that the Cabinet has been for years habituated to a loose official style. Powerful and lucid statement in diplomacy is of the highest value, and herein, observes the Times, is where British states[illegible] through out this whole affair have shown themselves careless or inefficient. On the contrary in regard to the American case no one can deny says the Times that it possesses the virtue of clearness and concentration in no ordinary degree. The tone of other leading journals is similar to that of the Times. Their articles are guarded in expression, and there is little in them that gives any hint that Great Britain ought on any contingency, to withdraw from the Treaty. The Times reminds Englishmen that claims which may seem to them entirely wide of the issue may not seem so to the mixed tribunal of lawyers and diplomatists at Geneva. This may be a hint that the English people should be preparing themselves to accept and ratify the award.

Bills Introduced

Senator Corbett on the 22d of January introduced a bill for the improvement of the Wallamet and Columbia rivers. The bill provides for an appropriation of fifty thousand dollars for the Wallamet below Portland, and fifty thousand dollars for the Columbia above Celilo.

On the same day Mr Corbett also introduced a bill directing the Third Auditor to settle all claims for expenses incurred in the Indian war of 1855–56 now on file in his office or which may be presented in accordance with the resolutions adopted by the Senate on the 10th and 27th of February 1571. The reference is to a class of suspended claims which have long been lying in the Third Auditor's office, but which do not come within the provisions of the former Act to provide for payment. A recent report on these claims shows that most of them are supported by sufficient evidence. If paid they will be paid at the same rates allowed for similar services and supplies under the former Act. Mr Corbett has hopes of getting both these bills through.

The Catholic Sentinel we observe has a long article accusing W H Gray of Astoria of inveracity in one of his statements published in the OREGONIAN when in fact as we have heretofore shown the offence was simply a typographical error committed in this office. Several newspapers have caught this matter up and this is the second time we have made the correction or explanation. But we presume the Sentinel did not see the first one. Mr Gray in some of his statements, may or may not be in error. We do not undertake to decide this but it is not just that he should be blamed for a blunder which was not his.

Mr Childers member of the British Parliament recently delivered an address to his constituents in which he advocated compulsory education. He said he had lately travelled on the continent where education is universal and on returning to England he had a deep feeling of shame in knowing what a large proportion of the population were ignorant and brought up in crime. In Germany he saw eight hundred recruits who were about to join their regiment and out of that large number there were only four who could not read or write.

Congress has at last agreed upon the apportionment for the next succeeding Congresses until 1882 and the agreement has gone to the President to become a law. The bill differs from the abstracts recently published in that it gives New Hampshire and Vermont the representation in the House of Representatives which they have hitherto enjoyed there by making the next House to consist of 283 members.

Royal T Sprague one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of California died at Sacramento on [illegible] February. He came to California some twenty three years ago and settled at Shasta when that place was known as Reading's Springs. The vacancy on the Supreme Bench occasioned by his death will be filled by appointment by the Governor and will restore to the Bench a Republican majority.

Two candidates for President of the United States have already been put in nomination. One of these is Judge Davis of the Supreme Court [illegible] so-called Labor Reformers. The other candidate is James Black [illegible] who was nominated by the National Prohibition Convention at Columbus [illegible] February. Delegates from [illegible] attendance.

Pungent Sketches

The [illegible] change the situation. [illegible] the political [illegible] President or [illegible] made a President [illegible] candidate [illegible] flag [illegible] Jackson had a revolt of a more serious character than any that has [illegible] Calhoun and Duff Green and Samuel D Ingham and Duane and hundreds of others [illegible] fiercely opposed him [illegible] the stupendous power of the United State Bank. But the people saw Jackson's merits with that clearness of vision which the people always retain and which no politicians can dim, and they elected him again. In 1864 there was a revolt against Lincoln. As great a man as Chase was at the head of it. Fremont and Wendell Phillips and Greeley and hundreds of others took part. But the people saw that Lincoln was honest and patient and true and that it was no cause for his displacement that he had not appointed every politician to office.

Referring to the fact that the so called Independent Reform Republicans have agreed to postpone their Cincinnati Convention till the 20th June in order that they may accept the Philadelphia nomination if it be a man on whom they can unite, the Herald says:

Now for the real meaning of this change of base. These men understand that if General Grant is nominated at Philadelphia their independent Cincinnati concern will collapse like the independent Tyler convention of 1844 or the independent Fremont and Cochrane convention of 1864 or the Andy Johnson new party convention of 1866. These anti Grant managers, every man of them a disappointed office seeker, know this and they have therefore resolved to fight Grant, not at Cincinnati but in the regular Philadelphia Convention. If they can and do defeat him there they will abandon their project of a new reform party and whistle the hopeful passive Democracy "down the wind." Clearly so, for what is the game of those so called Reform Republicans? It is the public plunder—

Only this and nothing more.

They have failed to get their rights under General Grant in Cabinet positions, foreign missions, custom houses, and postoffices, and as they despair of any new chance without a change in the White House, and as their only chance for a change in 1873 lies in the defeat of Grant at Philadelphia, they have resolved to bring all their guns to bear upon that Convention. If they fail at Philadelphia they will still have two strings to their bow. They can bolt or sell out to the administration, as may be deemed most expedient.

Here is something further which is equally to the purpose:

What grievance has Mr Sumner? That Senator has admitted publicly that he treated Grant in a disdainful and insulting way. What grievance has Mr Greeley? The record showed the other day that this great philanthropist, who despises office holding and strives to send all men to the West, has really more appointments in the Custom House than any other politician in the State. What grievance has Governor Fenton? He recommended men to office who did not satisfy the President. The President removed them and found better servants.

The Herald goes through the whole list in this slashing way. We give another extract:

These "reform" Republicans, in losing Vice-President Colfax have lost their chosen instrument for knocking General Grant in the head in the Philadelphia Convention. In the letter to his Indiana friends which we publish this morning Mr Colfax goes for General Grant against all comers and he begs that his (Colfax's) name may not be mentioned by any one in our State Convention in opposition to General Grant, whom I believe to be the first choice of a very large majority of the Republicans of the United States. This is in reply to a telegram from Indianapolis announcing a concerted effort in progress to secure for Mr Colfax the Republican nomination for President. He is not a disappointed office-seeker, he is satisfied with General Grant, there is no White House film over his eyes like that which enabled the venerable Mr Greeley to see men like trees walking. In short Mr Colfax speaks the general voice of the Republican party, while the disappointed office-seekers speak only for themselves. Their grievances, we admit, are sore and heavy, but as such things must be, what do they signify? In the estimation of the honest masses of the people they go for nothing.

We add one more paragraph:

This is all a merry comedy but it makes no impression upon the country. If the money changers in the Temple had been asked to go into caucus and express their opinions of Christ they would have evolved a series of indignant resolutions. So when the politicians, hungry, half fed and disappointed, set up their despairing howls about reform we remember the money changers. Above all we honor the President for going his way and doing his duty to the country careless of the praise or censure of mere politicians and confident that a just people will, when the time comes, give him his sure reward.

These are pungent paragraphs. There is an embodiment of truth in them that every person instinctively feels and recognizes.

George Kremer and John Randolph

Col Forney writes in his "Anecdotes of Public Men":

A good story is told of the celebrated George Kremer who figured conspicuously during the bargain and sale excitement forty five years ago. He was firmly convinced that Clay threw his influence against General Jackson by which the electoral vote of Kentucky was given to Adams for a consideration. John Randolph of Roanoke dilated upon the accusation against Clay to such an extent that the new Secretary of State was compelled to challenge him to mortal combat. But I do not propose a chapter on the bargain and sale. That episode is happily ignored by the retiring generation and is no longer recalled as a reproach on the memory of Henry Clay. I write simply to revive an incident between Randolph and Kremer characteristic of both. After one of the peculiar speeches of the eccentric Virginian which he interlarded with copious quotations in Latin and Greek prose and in a strain of well acted indignation poured forth a torrent of Pennsylvania German upon the head of the amazed and startled Randolph. His violent gesticulations, his loud and boisterous tones, his defiant manner were not more annoying to the imperious Southerner than the fact that he could not understand a word that was spoken. And when honest George took his seat covered with perspiration Randolph rose and begged the honorable gentleman from Pennsylvania to enlighten the House and the country by translating what he had just uttered. Kremer retorted as follows: "I have only to say in reply to my friend from Virginia that when he translates the dead languages which he is constantly using for the benefit of us country members into something like English I will be equally liberal in translating my Pennsylvania Dutch into something that the House can understand." The laugh was completely against Randolph.

A gentleman was describing to Douglass Jerrold the story of his courtship and marriage, how his wife had been brought up in a convent and was on the point of taking the veil when his presence burst upon her enraptured sight and she accepted him as her husband. Jerrold listened to the end of the story and then quietly remarked, "She simply thought you better than nun."

A reverend gentleman was addressing [illegible] and was trying to enforce the idea that the hearts of the little ones were [illegible] and needed regulating. Taking his watch [illegible] he said, "Now [illegible] this too fast and now too slow [illegible] upon the [illegible] head youngster.

Advices from the Ochoco Valley are to the 10th ult. Cattle were in excellent condition, many being fit for beef. From John Day and Willow Creek the reports are very favorable. In Tygh Valley the weather has been more severe and loss of stock much greater than at any other of the places mentioned.

The Albany Register says: A gentleman who resides in Ochoco but owns a farm in this county last fall purchased thirty five head of beef cattle out here and transferred them to his farm in this county. He sold the lot to butchers in Portland the other day, getting ten cents per pound net, clearing about a thousand dollars in the transaction.

C H Smith of Salem died very suddenly of heart disease on Wednesday evening last. He had been in ill health for some time but during the afternoon had been walking out and said he felt much better than usual. About eight o'clock in the evening while sitting by his fire he was seen to throw his head back and gasp dying instantly. It is thought heart disease was the cause.

A dispatch from Albany yesterday (1st) gives this: Three prisoners confined in the new County Jail made their escape this morning about 3 o'clock. One of them was caught on a farm near town soon after where he was secreted in a bin of oats. The other two made good their escape stealing a skiff and going down the river. The steamer Shoo Fly coming down from Corvallis was started in pursuit but at last accounts had not overtaken them. One of them named Douglass, has twice before escaped from the same jail and seems to thoroughly understand his business in that line. In the absence of anything else the affair creates considerable excitement.

From the Albany Register: There are contrary to the usual custom quite a few candidates for the county offices in Linn at the coming election. There are but thirty nine candidates for the office of Sheriff among the Democracy that we have any account of up to this writing, all of whom seem certain of the nomination. For the office of County Clerk there are three men in this city who actually declare they are not seeking the office. The candidates for the office of County Treasurer were not very numerous until it was announced the income from the office amounted to $2 500 or $3 000, since when the office has advanced considerably in public favor, and may prove as big a bone as any.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE

The New Testament revisers have got to the second chapter in Luke, and hope to finish their work in six years.

The rebuilding of the Catholic churches in Chicago, destroyed by the great fire, is to be commenced early in the spring under the supervision of Bishop Foley.

The abolition of the religious tests in the English Universities is not complete. There still remain a large number of fellowships which can be held only on condition of taking holy orders.

A single Bishop in the Protestant Episcopal Church reports that two hundred and seven out of two hundred and eighty five clergymen ordained by him came from other religious bodies.

Eighteen copies of the first edition of the Bible ever printed are in existence. They were printed in Metz between the years 1440 and 1415. Mr James Lennox of New York owns one of these copies.

The late Congregational Council voted that nothing less than the following amounts ought to be raised the ensuing year: For church building $100 000; for work among the freedmen, $400 000; for Home Missions $500 000.

The Catholic Directory for 1872 shows that in the ranks of the Peerage of Great Britain the Roman Catholics can reckon one Duke (Norfolk), one Marquis (Bute), eight Earls, four Viscounts, twenty Barons, the list ending with Lord O'Hagan, the Lord Chancellor of Ireland.

The increase in the clergy of the Protestant Episcopal Church for 1871 was 62, being a little more than two per cent. The increase in the number of members was 17 000, or a ratio of eight per cent. The amount of contributions for 1871 was $5 544 74 81, or more than four dollars to each communicant.

The receipts of the Presbyterian Board of Missions were greater by one sixth than the highest receipts of the Board in any corresponding month while the Old School Church bore its entire support. A correspondent of the Evangelist asks whether the Board have only gained one sixth of additional power by the reunion.

The most wealthy church in New York city is the Protestant Episcopal, which holds property to the value of $7 500 000 and has accommodations for 60 000 people. The Roman Catholic Church ranks next, having edifices valued at $5 400 000, with accommodations for 50 000. The Presbyterian Church ranks third and the Methodist Episcopal Church fourth.

Rev J S Dennis in the New York [illegible] rehearses the labors of missionaries in preparing a religious and educational literature in the Arabic language. The Arabic language is the spoken tongue of 60 000 000 and the sacred language of 120 000 000 of Moslems. The entire Bible has been translated and is now issued in many editions either complete or in parts. An edition of the Gospels in raised Arabic characters is also issued for the blind.

Bishop McTyeire makes strange statements in the Nashville Christian Advocate concerning the indifference of the Southern Methodists to the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. He mentions a church where the pastor was [illegible] two local elders living within three and five miles of it where this sacrament had not been observed in ten years. "Why," he says, "we have churches in the country with moss on the roof that have never had the Lord's Supper celebrated in them."

Chairman County Committee

A Veteran Passenger—We had the pleasure yesterday of interviewing for a few moments our old friend C P Ferry who started a long time ago from Omaha to cross the plains by the Union and Central Pacific Railroads He has grown to be much older then he was when he started but beyond his advanced age, is much the same companionable fellow as when he left here last year He related to us some of his experiences in the great snow blockade He was in the first train stopped by the snow, near Cheyenne and was thirty four days in making the trip from Omaha to San Francisco There were with his car several Pullman cars As the trains from the East successively came up, the number of passengers came to be some eight or nine hundred and among them all there was much sickness and suffering There was one car which had the small pox the others had erysipelas pneumonia, sore throat, etc Several passengers were left at various stations on account of sickness There were two or three births also in the cars At first the passengers had to subsist on crackers, cheese, dried halibut and one or two articles not generally counted as varieties of food After getting up to Laramie, the passengers who had money, were able to purchase other articles of food so that they fared comparatively well, most of the time. Bread could not be obtained at all, and occasionally, there were uncomfortable long fasts between the feasts, for all hands The poor emigrants frequently suffered, not only from hunger but extreme cold A portion of the time, the thermometer stood from thirty to thirty-six degrees below zero, and the wind blew furiously There were among the employes of all the trains the utmost carelessness and inefficiency of management. Every train but one of the eight or ten at Laramie was run into by other trains. On one occasion a locomotive ran into an emigrant car containing fifty or sixty passengers with such force as to break the car fairly into two One passenger was killed, another had a foot crushed off, and fourteen were severely injured. At another time, one train which was flagged close upon another, ran into the train in front of it through carelessness of the engineer The rear engineer whistled down brakes just before the collision took place when the brakemen of the forward train put on brakes, and thus made the collison doubly severe After this accident, the conductor of the forward train, without going back to see the extent of damage done, signaled to go ahead Shortly after, and the rear car began to bump terribly, when the passengers at once pulled the bell rope but no attention was paid to it till the porter ran through the train to the express car and advised the conductor that the rear car was off the track He still paid no attention to the matter for some time, but finally, after the car had bumped over two or three miles of ties, he concluded to stop At another time while a passenger train was standing on the track at an eating station, another train came up at full speed and ran into the rear car of the standing train, smashing it into pieces and killing the only man that happened to be in it the man being off getting a meal Mr Ferry says there are vast piles of freight all along the road and that it will be months before it can all be brought through The Union Pacific Co had but one snow plow and that was insufficient in snow eight feet deep. The shovels used by the men at work in the cuts, where the snow had to be thrown sixteen feet high, were the old fashioned, short-handled barn shovels, and the men could not with such tools, accomplish much Everything was done in a slip shod sort of way, and the passengers were subjected not only to gross neglect but insulting insolence. We conclude that they could not have had exactly a pleasant trip of it

The Oldest Inhabitant Question —An old settler expresses an opinion that Solomon H Smith did not come to Oregon in 1832, and that Gov Curry is right in saying that J H O Neill is the first permanent American settler now living in Oregon The Herald has mentioned Mr. McDonald as the oldest inhabitant and the Bulletin mentions Mr Donald Mason as having been here since 1825 Both these gentlemen, however, came here not as settlers, but in the employ of the Hudson s Bay Co and did not become settlers nor citizens till many years after the arrival of Messrs O Neill and Hubbard They cannot, therefore, be considered in the matter of the controversy growing out of Gov Curry's statement at Mr McDonald is not even now a citizen, nor did he ever reside permanently in Oregon, nor does he now reside in Oregon

Assault and Battery —Yesterday morning Captain Smith and second mate Henry Miller of the bark Metis were brought before the Police Magistrate charged with assault and battery Mr. Bellinger, of the firm of Bellinger & Burmester, was in court to show that the alleged assault was only the exercise of sufficient force on the part of the accused to prevent the sailors from deserting the ship The person alleged to have been assaulted, however did not appear in court and the complaints against the officers were dismissed, and the defendants discharged from arrest

The Mails —Mr Underwood Postal Agent was here yesterday morning when the Idaho arrived and he at once took measures to forward the immense piles of bags to their destinations An extra box car had to be put on the O & C railroad to take the mail matter for points up the valley There were about fifty or sixty bags for Olympia and Puget Sound offices

Pompeii in 18[illegible]

[illegible] ou a tomb of the still buried [illegible] If a glance would content you did the transit last a day. Drawing up at a turnstile two francs are paid as entrance fee; a guide in uniform takes charge of your party and you enter at once among the roofless ruins. Probably you know their history. They slept for ages in a bed of ashes. Gardens, vineyards and grasses grew above them. Peasants lived suspicious of dwellings and palaces, market places and theaters beneath them as their sires had done for centuries. The grave of Pompeii garlanded with the roses of a perpetual Spring, was lost. Seventy years after Christ a volcanic shower of ashes that gave no warning caught the unsuspecting citizens in the full swing of their pleasures and stilled them forever. A dress of fertile earth blotted out the scar. Only in modern times did men find out the secret. Excavations then begun; hidden wonders came to light, and though not more than half the great tomb of a buried city has been explored, the conditions of old Roman life have been revealed far beyond what books or traditions had previously made known. With these results so far as they are not revolting to delicacy this notice will deal.

There is a difficulty in embodying Pompeii to the mind's eye of a reader. You walk its streets, notice the houses on either hand, see the open doors, mark byways and alleys, enter the Exchange, look down long avenues to the arched gateways, thread winding lanes, tramp over flagged sidewalks, scrutinize the curbs fretted by carriage wheels, read the signs beside and above the entrances to shops and stores, rest in the rooms and mount the stairs and penetrate the chambers of the dwellings, and yet fail to carry away the right words to convey your impressions. There is nothing grand. The place is anything but beautiful. A ruined castle possesses a hundredfold greater attractions. Tear the covers from a book, lift the crust from a pie or bereave a bureau of its drawers, and you have a homely but exact idea of the impression your visit has left upon your mind as you drive back to Naples. And yet you have been in actual contact with the life of the Pompeians and know what they were doing eighteen hundred and one years ago when the fatal hour struck.

This year the excavators have been at work down the street of the goldsmiths. The work is begun at the top of the soil sixty feet or more from the level of the streets. Trees and vegetation are cleared from the surface, men with picks and spades loosen and throw out the earth, and troops of black eyed, sunny-cheeked girls with baskets and paniers bear it away to the wagons. Arrived down to the roofs, the workmen proceed more carefully. Adepts crumble the scoria in their hands to find antiques. From the hollows of every chamber they clean out the ashes with great precaution. The objects are thus found exactly as they were left in the hurry and confusion with which the occupants escaped. Most houses can be recognized for what they were. Inscriptions on their walls, signs on their porches, carved emblems (proh pudor) at their doorways tell their story. Thus there are private mansions and taverns, workshops and laundries, dancing halls and bagnios indiscriminately lighted upon. Wall paintings sometimes of great excellence, are found. The diggers uncovered one this summer—"Bacchus and Ariadne"—fresh in color as a new picture of Bierstadt. The young wine-god brown-faced, lusty and cinctured with vine leaves, is regarding a sleeping girl on a bank with rapt admiration. Her fair hair, beautiful figure and diaphanous drapery made the fresco a master piece for drawing and coloring. Covering one side of the dining room opposite the lecti, it was always in full view of the diners. In the garden of this house the workmen showed us holes where trees had grown and a marble fountain that played in the midst of a flower bed. An adjacent house had evidently been in a state of repair when the volcanic storm buried it. Painters, decorators and cleaners were masters of the situation. Dinner, however, had not been forgotten. A solitary pot stood on the stove. And a bronze dish upon which was a sucking pig ready for baking stood waiting at the oven's mouth for removal of a batch of bread. It never entered, nor did the loaves come out till after a delay of seventeen hundred years. M Fiorelli has them now, twenty one in number, hard and black, but perfectly preserved.

We took a random walk through the streets recently unearthed. The southern sun was shining in at open doors and through broken roofs. In the dwellings everything was pitilessly bright. The secrets of every chamber were revealed. The carriage road between the two footpaths is of smooth flags, irregular in shape, deftly fitted like stones in a church tower. Modern Florence is so paved. We turn a corner and are startled by the figure of a dead man lying inside a door. He lies as he fell. His attitude is preserved exactly by a process recently adopted. In the hurry of the storm he had sought refuge in a porch. But he never crossed its threshold again, and you can see how death grappled with him there and threw him struggling and fighting for life. In the baker's shop is the arched oven, with fireplace and flues, all perfect for baking bread to-day. Mills for grinding—cones of grit stone, convex and concave, turned capstan fashion by a cross bar—stand in the shop. In his neighbor's, the fuller's shop, are the charges for work done chalked upon the walls. "There they are," said our guide. "Your excellencies can doubtless read Latin. But the poor man never paid." A more pretentious tradesman was the leather cutter not far off. Within was the table gashed with knife marks upon which the man cut his last strands. He had once been a soldier of the Ninth Cohort and so announced under his name.

There was in Pompeii a glut of public houses, sometimes four and five in a street. But like the Neapolitan tipplers of to-day, who make a great hubbub but seldom get downright drunk, the roystering Pompeians probably kept themselves well in bounds. The wines of Vesuvius are mild, and in the virtue of the climate, which makes existence a delight, the temptation to inebriety is small. We stopped at an inn on the wall of which was painted an elephant, and beneath it the Latin words which, translated, were: "Sittius has established the Elephant Osteria. Triclinium with Three beds. Every comfort." Inside are the Triclinium or dining room, the dinner table and the three divans for convives. It must have been a common place in its best day, [illegible] as for its comfort, Pompeians in common with modern Neapolitans were apparently not exacting. The house of Siricus lower down the street is curious. His name is written up in two places—in a chamber and over the front door. On his threshold is cut "Salve Lucrum." The interior is well appointed, with a nice garden in the rear and trellises, rockeries and decorations suggestive of woman's handiwork. Skeletons of a little dog, tortoises and two goats indicate that pet animals were about. The windows and doors are bordered with graceful designs, the walls of the sleeping apartments are covered with traceries, flowers, festoons, birds, dolphins and bacchantes, and the choice domicile is decorated with zones of rich colors now called Raphaelesque. Raphael startled the artists of his day by his paintings in this style on the arcades of the Vatican. Pompeii was then undiscovered. But it is now known that he caught the idea from the ceilings of the ruins of Nero's golden house. Who Siricus was not even M Fiorelli can make apparent. Turning into another street, the visitor comes upon the bagnios. They are of three distinct classes, two of which are happily unknown to the modern world. Each class is designated by an emblem carved in stone placed beside the door [illegible] refinement of immorality. Pompeii [illegible] its Corinth [illegible] is frequented only by the patrician or lordly [illegible] pictured in colors and shadings upon every floor and wall. In [illegible] obscene and terrible on the floors [illegible] stared the unblushing [illegible] every corner. And Fable [illegible] nastiness [illegible] fretwork [illegible] of the dwellers in the doomed city [illegible] Rome [illegible] Advertisements [illegible] in the same [illegible] street is remarkable only for its window shutters. They were closed, being of wood, which has mouldered away, the exact impress remains in the hardened ashes. They were nine in number. The edge of each overlapped and they slid into a groove. In the centre of the shutters a small door was made, closed by lock and key. This was for the lover to let himself in and out after he had closed the doors. He [illegible] the former on the fatal day [illegible] alas, to escape, and so ended his life [illegible] dye woods and blacking powders.

Confining our visit still to the discoveries of the present year, we reach the house of Proculus. It is superior to all we have seen. Its owner was a public man. At the moment he was candidate for Ædile. Upon pillars across the street are still to be seen placarded "Proculus for Ædile." "Fishermen for Proculus." "Laborers lean to Proculus," scribbled to the bottom. Gladiators could not vote, nor laborers, nor inn keepers, nor soldiers. Women did not vote nor clamor for the privilege, but they exercised their unquestioned right of influencing voters. Marcella prays success for Proculus, is still a petition to be read upon a pillar. The house of Proculus is upon the same plan upon which most of the stylish Pompeian mansions were built. Picture a dwelling running back from the street; the front a suit of small reception rooms; the middle, two open roofless courts, atrium and peristyle, divided by a drawing room against the windows, for there were glass windows in Pompeii—of which when privacy was required curtains could be let down—an arcade beneath, with doors opening to the offices and cubicula of the house, and a hall leading to the street door, and you have a rough outline of a rich man's town house in Pompeii. The inner court was sacred to the family. There are remains of a little garden and two small marble fountains that once sent a cascade over a diminutive rockery into flower beds. Double rows of columns mapped out a mellow gloom in the perfumed retreat where the ladies spent their elegant leisure. The pavement of alternate brick and marble, diamond shapes, is still perfect. Paintings of colors that would harmonize with the flowers and shrubbery adorned the doors opening out of the boudoir, bedrooms, and are still fresh and beautiful. Everything is designed with reference to "elegant privacy," for little intercourse of families was known in Roman life. In the peristyle of this house there was found the skeleton of a hen only. All other living creatures had left it. In the atrium, however, a woman endeavoring to escape had fallen dead. She had gathered jewels and amulets, and was fast escaping, when death arrested her in the outer court. She never rose again.

Of the inhabitants of Pompeii thousands doubtless perished, though many more were saved. Hand in hand large crowds groped their way through the streets, and escaped to the open country. At the chief gate there stood a sentinel who sternly kept his post, and died in harness. Planted in his sentry box, he covered his mouth with his tunic, and held on against the choking and sulphurous shower. But the ashes fell and fell, filling the streets beyond possibility of being passed, and buried the soldier, holding his weapon with one hand and veiling his mouth with the other. He was found there—a standing skeleton grasping a rusted sword. Sad discoveries are being constantly made. The week previous to our visit two skeletons had been uncovered in a street. They were young—a lad of twenty, perhaps, and a girl of sixteen—and were locked in each other's embrace. In their flight they had fallen together and death had wedded them. There was a mother with her three children, hand in hand, who vainly tried to escape the destroyer. The mother singly might have done so, but she would not leave her children. Plenty of food for thought is furnished by the fact that more than six hundred skeletons have been exhumed. Many of these tell their own story. Of the family of Diomed seventeen were stifled in a well stocked wine cellar. In their agony of fear the fugitives were huddled together in a corner. One swooning girl fell forward on to the bed of ashes that had drifted in. She left the impress of her bosom in the drift like a seal in softened wax. The tell tale cast shows her breasts to have been beautiful as Hebe's.

I have spoken of the jewels found in the atrium of the house of Proculus. There was no money. Those bearing it had escaped. Perhaps not far. A woman was unearthed in a street hard by who had fallen, clutching a bag of gold. It was in connection with this body that one of the most interesting of Fiorelli's discoveries came about. The hardened ashes became a mold of all the victims. In this case the scoriæ did not break. Into the cavity plaster of paris was poured. The result was a perfect cast of the woman. After eighteen centuries here was a counterpart of the poor creature as she died, gripping her bag of ninety pieces of gold, two silver vases, some jewels and keys. Hurrying along the street, she had tripped and fallen on her left side. Her arm is raised and twisted. Her hand, beautifully formed, is clutched in despair, the nails entering the skin. Head dress, face, tissue of garments and rings on her fingers are reproduced exactly. Succeeding in this, Fiorelli has since made casts of more than thirty victims. They are to be seen at his house in the suburbs. There are brawny gladiators, little children, porters who staggered and fell under their loads, and men of business who lingered too long at their desks. In nearly all an expression of suffering is manifest. One young girl, however, in the flush of health, her form modeled free from rigidness, appears to have died without a struggle. One of her hands is half open as if holding her veil. There are the sleeves to her wrists, the needle work on her sandals, the rents in her clothing, the bared shoulder and half naked bosom as she lay in her last swoon. She had covered her mouth with her tunic to keep out the choking ashes and she fell in running—her face to the ground. No strength was left to arise. In her effort for recovery she put out her arm, her head dropped upon it and she died. The fatal storm came on a festival day in the city, or many more would doubtless have perished. The holiday makers escaped. Looking up from the games in the arena they must have seen the awful portent when Vesuvius began to vomit its ashes. Taking the warning they fled. Placards announcing the theatrical performances of that day are still to be read on the walls. The Pompeians were theatre going. They were given up to pleasure. Situated in an Eden of natural beauty, where green uplands, lofty mountains, soft inflections of rivers and valleys, and shifting splendors of sunlight and moonlight on a faultless sea tempted to indolence, theirs was a life of the senses. Even now, when the city has been dead, buried eighteen hundred years, and resurrectionized, one is startled by an air of gayety that clings to it. Doubtless it had its philosophers, but they do not appear. No vestige of christianity has yet been discovered. What may be revealed is beyond conjecture. It is satisfactory to know however that the work of excavation goes on more thoroughly than ever before, and that the city which Vesuvius by burying has preserved to the world, when its shroud of ashes is torn away will present a Roman town as it was in the days of Vespasian.

A [illegible] was established [illegible] standard [illegible] Goods [illegible] to 25 cents per [illegible]

A [illegible] was received [illegible] New York [illegible] of stating that Nails [illegible] further advance [illegible] firm [illegible] No advance has been made in the San Francisco market [illegible]

The following table gives the stock of Flour and Grain in store in Liverpool at the close of the last three years, which compare as follows:

	1869	1870	1871
Flour, bbls	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Flour, sks	[illegible] 000	[illegible]	41 [illegible]
Wheat, qrs	[illegible] 000	[illegible]	[illegible] 000
Corn, qrs	[illegible] 000	[illegible]	[illegible]

By the above table it will be readily perceived that the [illegible] of the commencement of this year with the beginning of 1870 is unfavorable [illegible] also take into consideration that [illegible] the amount afloat last year at the same time and also that tonnage is lower [illegible] this in all producing countries. The imports of Wheat into Great Britain last year were [illegible] 44,000,000 centals, nearly 10,000,000 centals in excess of the previous year. The [illegible] from which [illegible] the United States. The imports from Russia aggregated [illegible] centals and from the United States 15,050,000. The United States increased [illegible] in comparison with [illegible] Russia. Germany supplied [illegible] centals [illegible] British North America supplied [illegible] in comparison with 1870. The quantity of Flour imported by the United Kingdom compares as follows; as also Wheat for the past three years:

		Flour	Wheat
1869	centals	[illegible]	42 41[illegible]
1870		[illegible] 404 [illegible]	3[illegible] 33 000
1871		[illegible] 4 2 [illegible]	44 333,000

The United States supplied 2,000,000 centals of the Flour and Germany 1,080,000 centals; both countries show a falling off in amount supplied in comparison with 1870.

From our San Francisco exchanges we collate the following changes and items of information regarding the market of that city:

Imports of Rice for the week ending Feb 21st have been unprecedented, consisting of 3,894,000 lb. China [illegible] over one-third of the quantity of that kind imported during the whole of last year. At last accounts only two vessels were loading at Hongkong for this port, so we are not likely to have any large amount again for two or three months.

The firmness in Copper is likely to be maintained. The price at Liverpool at the close of the year was £15 higher than in October, and £25 higher than the Minimum rates.

The receipts of Petroleum during the week ending Feb 21st have been unusually large, embracing over 200,000 gallons, consisting of [illegible] Downer's, Hunnewell's, Macy's, Oleophane, etc. The receipts of China Nut have also been large, embracing about 4,000 cs.

The feature of the week has been the activity in Oysters, of which 10,000 cs have been placed and the price advanced [illegible] for all brands.

Receipts of Sugar for the week ending Feb 21st have been of a liberal character, embracing several million pounds both refinery and grocery grades. All three refineries are in operation and competition is likely to be active by the first of the month.

Late dates to January 29th have been received at New York announcing an advance in Coffee with a loss of 75,000 bags on account of the United States. We are informed that a leading San Francisco importer who lately sent a quantity of Costa Rica to St. Louis has returns of a sale of 1,000 bags in that city at 24[illegible]

259,400 bbls Mackerel were inspected in Massachusetts in 1871. This quantity is 60,000 bbls less than for 1870. It is gratifying to note that while No. 1 Mackerel have been growing scarce for several years, the proportions of that description last year was 30,000 bbls in excess of 1870. The prospects of securing a goodly proportion of large Mackerel for the ensuing year is flattering.

The exports of Wheat and Flour from San Francisco compare as follows:

	Flour bbls	Wheat centals	In Wheat centals	Total Value
1865	322 875	2 262 601	3 229,723	$6 066 9[illegible]
1867	532 030	4 6[illegible] 301	6 228,391	12,652 [illegible]
1868	465 403	4 072 108	5 463,4[illegible]	11 012 108
1869	428 233	5 010 981	6 295,[illegible]	10 897 108
1870	[illegible] 71	4 215 [illegible]	4 944,014	9 033 [illegible]
1871	[illegible] 91[illegible]	1 311 579	2 067,488	4 6[illegible]

The crop years of 1867, 1868 and 1869 were the most favorable in the history of California. To all appearance the ensuing harvest will be the largest gathered in the State.

The San Francisco Bulletin says:

The furniture store of Goodwin & Co was seized by the Sheriff yesterday at the instance of a Boston gentleman, who brings suit for $180,000. The establishment is one of the largest of the kind in this city and was supposed to be doing a flourishing business.
